Bosch Continues to Redefine Wood Drilling with Innovative Daredevil™ Spade Bit

Design advance pulls the bit through wood to save both time and strain

Mt. Prospect, Ill., October 4, 2013 – The Daredevil™ was designed to answer the needs of electricians, plumbers and other professional users for greater speed, ease of use and hole quality. The Daredevil spade bit takes performance to another level because it offers best-in-class speed, ease of use and durability – based on independent testing.

The key to this performance is the patented design of the bit itself. While other wood-drilling products come with a threaded tip for fast feeding, Bosch has incorporated a full-cone threaded tip, which increases not only the speed of the bit, but also ease of drilling.

Another patented feature of the Daredevil is the contoured paddle. This wave-like shape speeds up chip removal adding to the speed of the bit. The combination of these two features creates astonishing results: In independent testing, the Daredevil was 2.4x faster and required 53% less force than the Irwin Blue Groove*.

It doesn't end there. While spade bits are not expected to produce anything beyond average hole quality, the Daredevil is not your average spade bit. The patented spur-and-reamer design is unique because it not only scores the wood for a clean entry hole, but also has angled cutting edges that ream the hole for reduced breakout, leaving a cleaner exit hole than any competitive bit.
